

To: Andrew Sciambra
From: Harold Weisberg
Kerry Thornley's pay slip

3/16/68

I had occasion to speak to Jim Lawrence yesterday afternoon about another matter and I asked him if the names and numbers on the pay slip Barbara Reid found under the 3x5 cards in the box given her by Kerry Thornley sounded familiar. The name of the employer seems to coincide with that of an establishment in which Jim has eaten often. The second name, which Barbara had been uncertain about from the writing, seemed to me as though it might be slightly off. I asked him if he could recall a drive-in with similar but not identical name. He does.

As soon as he can he will check out the employment period which is only in part represented by the slip and the other place, under variants of the name. He will let you know the result. From the way he spoke, I gather he is well acquainted at Trappers' Inn, and that he anticipates no difficulty in the check.

I am not familiar with Thornley's writing, but with the address 333 Broadway given, it seems possible that what Barbara read to me as Brandwell Drive-In might be "Broadway".

He will also ascertain if the other numbers could represent anything in the Los Angeles area.

~~ZZZZZZ~~ I take the marking of this <sup>card</sup> box to be typical of Thornley as a "writer". He labelled it "story leads". It had nothing but blank cards in it. He left it with Barbara when he went to Washington.